HEAVYWEIGHT CONTENDER

A possible heavyweight contender in local racing this year will be the 44′ catamaran Sea Bird now being built by Hugo Myers, Robert Hanel, and Dr. John Novak. Shown seated in two of the new craft's four cockpits are Myers (above left) and Lorne Young.

Among the boat's unusual features will be a rotating 54′ mast with a double luff, 582 square foot mainsail. Shown demonstrating the scale and working of this – possibly the largest double luff sail ever built – are sailmakers Ken Bruns and Bob Broussard. A Genoa will add an additional 500 square feet of sail area.

Further specifications of Sea Bird include a total beam 19′ 10″, a hull beam at water line of 30″, a hull draft of 18″, a weight of 5,000 lbs. dry, retractable rudders, and an expected top speed of about 25 knots.

Designer Myers, a longtime figure in sailing, has been racing since 1957, first gaining major attention in this field as a winner in the 1958 Ensenada Race with his catamaran Dreamer.

"Sshh! World's Record"

What must be one of the world's sport fishing records has never been publicized because it is held by a woman who was sorry when she established it.

Camilla Pillsbury, an attractive Los Angeles resident, with no experience and little interest in deep sea fishing, was persuaded to go with a fishing party off Acapulco. When it came her turn in one of the seats, she held the pole as instructed and soon had a big sailfish on the end of the line. He leaped and thrashed and it seemed that Cam wouldn't be able to hold him, although she was doing her best – her "Pillsbury's best," one might say, if that's not too flowery.

Then, the tension on the line eased and the fish was hauled aboard – drowned. Experts concluded that the line had been looped around his tail and that he had been hog-tied and hauled backwards through the water, forcing water into the gills the wrong way and preventing the regular flow from which a fish gets oxygen.

The fish was later weighed in at 118 pounds – exactly Cam's weight – which was undoubtedly the world's featherweight sailfish-drowning record. But to Cam, who is both sporting and humane – the catch didn't seem to be either.

However, her feat was, in some respects, extra sporting. If fishermen could take fish only by drowning or hog-tying, there wouldn't need to be any other restrictions or licenses and the ocean would still be so full of fish that boats couldn't get through. Catching fish by drowning them is like catching deer by running them down on foot or capturing gorillas by wrestling.

As to humaneness, she may have given that sailfish his greatest wish. It is easy to imagine another sailfish saying excitedly to others, "You know Sylvester – the one we always called 'Clumsy' – who was always jibing and running into logs and stuff? Poor fish. I was always sorry for him. I remember him saying, one day, 'I would gladly

NEW STEAK HOUSE AT MARINA DEL REY

Adding finishing touches to Chuck's Steak House at Marina del Rey this week were young working owners (from left below): Dave Alderman and Mark Richert, Richert's wife Mary, and General Manager Bernie Friedman.

Located at the south end of the Marina's public beach (top photo), the new restaurant is the latest addition to a fast growing chain begun in Hawaii by third owner Chuck Rolles, and now operating in Los Angeles, La Jolla, Escondido, Sacramento, Oakland, San Mateo, Los Altos, and Santa Barbara.

Designed to feature steak, lobster, liquor, and informality, all at moderate prices, the new Marina dinner restaurant will offer a seating capacity of about 180 indoors, with room for an additional 60 on an outdoor terrace overlooking the beach (weather permitting).

Opening date is scheduled for early April.

— CATALINA CHALLENGE RACE

This year's California YC-sponsored Catalina Challenge Race on April 13 – won last year by Maury Fortney's Zippé (#43) – will run a shorter course than last year's.

The course, which is again much like that used in this high speed race in years past, will run from Marina del Rey to the west end of Catalina, around the island to the east end, past Avalon, then back to Marina del Rey. Winner of the Hal Roach Trophy will be the first boat past the mark at the island's east end.

HOW EFFICIENT ARE YOUR SAILS?

Kantola's "Burning Bright" did 14.4 knots in a 16 knot wind, winning the World's Fastest Trimaran trophy. High speed sails are the result of efficient, scientific designs and modern methods, coupled with traditional craftsmanship.

give my life if, just once, I could do something that would make other fish think I was great – something no other fish has ever done.' Well, yesterday, while the rest of us were just swimming around, here comes Sylvester, zipping along like a torpedo – and backwards, yet! He saw that we were flabbergasted and got the most satisfied look on his face. We haven't seen him since and we can't imagine how he did it. I guess we underestimated him."

So, it may be just as well that Cam didn't try to revive Sylvester after all. And it's doubtful if mouth-to-mouth resuscitation would work on a fish.

TRUE OR FALSE

(1) A catamaran is a light bark of Polynesian origin, the go-go gondola of Hawaii.

(2) A yacht is a status symbol rated slightly above an invitation to a Truman Capote party.

(3) A cabin cruiser is a pleasure boat with a cabin.

(4) A trireme was a three-decker fighting ship of antiquity.

(5) Cleopatra's barge was the "in" means of transportation on the Nile. Shakespeare wrote about it, and Elizabeth Taylor made the words superfluous.

Of course every statement is TRUE. No false declarations for us. We can't afford to make them in insurance.

It's also true that a catamaran, a cabin cruiser and a yacht are insurable. And if you happen to own a trireme or Cleopatra's barge . . . .

MARINA DEL REY NOW "IN THE BLACK"

Changes at Marina del Rey since the photo at right was taken in April, 1962 (about six years ago) were highlighted in a recent announcement by Supervisor Burton W. Chace that the Marina project is now financially "in the black" and will be self sustaining from now on.

Among completed private improvements since the aerial view shown was made are: 4,012 berths in 17 marinas, currently holding 3,387 small craft; 930 apartments in seven complexes, now housing 870 families; 24 retail enterprises including two banks, one fuel dock, and one auto service station; one major hotel and two motels with a total of 232 suites; seven major restaurants and four coffee shops; two haul out and marine repair yards; one portable boat dry storage and hoist-launching facility currently holding 100 small craft; one sportfishing center; and 20 yacht sales outlets and brokerages. Total estimated cost of these improvements has been $30,400,000.

AMONG THE CLUBS

Continued

The races are held outside Marina del Rey or King Harbor, with the challenger choosing the course on which he hopes to defeat the cup holder. Holders of the cup to date have been Paul Hoss (#322) and Steve Kosberg (#219).
