SHOWN STITCHING A SAIL (above) is sailmaker Ken Bruns who with his brother Wally (background) has recently set up shop at Marina del Rey. As a maker of racing sails Mr. Bruns — until recently — loft manager at Hallmark in Long Beach and before that a partner with Robert Broussard — has for the past few years designed and made most of the sails for the speedy Malibu Outriggers.

Among race winning aids he will offer skippers in this area are computer designed spinnakers engineered by aeronautical designer Jack Stevenson (for whose Win'ard Sabot National winner he also made this year's sails), some new techniques in using a zippered foot for better flattening, and tapered seams for better airfoil slope.

Sales manager for the new shop is John Hjorth Jr., owner and skipper of the 35' C.S.K. catamaran, Hiolani.

By Bill Borton

Will the Real Santa Claus Please Stand Up?

'Twas the night before Christmas, when all through the marina,
Not a creature was stirring, not even a sardina.

The boats were all moored in their slips with great care

Assuming, next week, everything would be there.

Most owners were home or at parties or play

But some live-aboards had some children and they,

Like I, I suppose, were afraid that Saint Nick,

Descending a small ventilator, might stick.

So I, in my watch-cap, stood on the sea wall

And quietly watched to see what would befall,

'Til down a short way, where the shadows were black,

A figure I glimpsed with a bag on his back.

Was this old Saint Nick? Then I saw red boat.

Another Saint Nick? And arriving afloat?

When from the red boat there arose such a clatter

I knew in a flash just what was the matter.

The shadowy figure had theft as his goal

And the noisy red boat was the harbor patrol.

The one got away and the dauntless crime-thwarter

Was not Santa either but Chief Leo Porter.

However, I thought for a moment and then

Realized that, to boaters, Leo and his men

Are better by far than a real Santa Claus,

Who comes once a year. And this is because

They come every night, many times in a shift,

And each theft that's prevented is good as a gift!
